

Charge of the God

By Jamie Morgan and Catherine Pennington

Adapted from Doreen Valiente's charge of the Star Goddess

November 2008

I who am the power of the velvet darkness, And the echoing space between the stars, And the depths of the endless sea, and the fire in the hearts of all. I come from the darkness, from out of that which is everything. From me all things proceed, and unto me all things must return; and before my face, beloved of our loins, let thine innermost human self be enfolded, in the rapture of the world.

Let my worship be within the body that dances; And therefore, let: Splendor and potency, Command and kindness, Respect and modesty, Laughter and solemnity shine through you.

And you who thinkest to know me – then walk with me in the light and the dark, in the shadows of your soul and the brilliance of your love. And together we may find the mysteries of the universe if you have the patience to see into the hearts of all, including yourself. For behold, I have been beside thee from the first sunrise and will walk with thee to the end of days.
